Daily Oil Overview

Oil prices rebounded on Wednesday: Brent crude closed at $92.76 a barrel, up 1.4%, and US WTI closed at $86.53, up 0.6%, both pulling away from the two-month lows hit on Tuesday. The rebound was driven by a tough statement from Iran — Tehran said it would not let "a single atom" of enriched uranium leave the country and denied it is negotiating with the United States, cooling hopes for a peace deal. But supply keeps recovering fast: OPEC's monthly report showed OPEC+ output jumped by 2.04 million barrels a day in October, with Saudi output back up to 10.56 million barrels a day, the highest since the war began, while Middle East crude outages have fallen to about 3.8 million barrels a day. The Strait of Hormuz is still troubled waters — 37 ships were attacked there in October, the highest monthly total since the war began. Official US inventory data comes out on Thursday, and the IEA's monthly report follows on Friday.

News in Brief

1. Oil rebounds on Wednesday; Brent settles at $92.76. Brent crude for January delivery settled at $92.76 a barrel, up $1.27 (+1.4%); WTI for December settled at $86.53, up $0.49 (+0.6%). Brent touched $93.90 during the session. Even after the rebound, Brent is still down about 21% since the start of November, and WTI about 17%. 2. OPEC report: OPEC+ output jumped 2.04 million bpd in October; Saudi back to 10.56 million bpd. OPEC's November monthly report showed total OPEC+ crude output reached 41.23 million barrels a day in October, up 2.04 million from September. Saudi Arabia told

OPEC its October output was 10.563 million barrels a day, up from 8.372 million in September — a 26% rise and the highest since the war began. OPEC kept its global oil demand growth forecasts for 2026 and 2027 unchanged. 3. Iran: not "a single atom" of enriched uranium will leave, and no talks with the US. Mohsen Rezaee, secretary of Iran's Supreme National Security Council, said Iran would not allow any enriched uranium to leave the country and that there are no talks taking place with Washington. The US has said nuclear issues must be part of any first round of talks aimed at ending the US-Israeli war on Iran. The two sides remain far apart on the core issues, so a breakthrough looks unlikely in the short term. 4. Strait of Hormuz: 37 ships attacked in October, the highest monthly total since the war began. Data from the Washington Institute for Near East Policy showed 37 ships were attacked in the Strait of Hormuz and nearby shipping lanes in October, the highest monthly total since the war began. Iran's Revolutionary Guards Navy said on Tuesday that two tankers caught fire after hitting naval mines on an "unauthorized route" in the strait. Analysts say that even if a political deal is reached, shipping is unlikely to return to normal soon — it would take mine clearance, lower insurance costs, and shipowners willing to take the risk. 5. US crude stocks rose about 9 million barrels; strategic reserve seen hitting a new low. Data from the American Petroleum Institute showed US crude inventories rose by about 9 million barrels last week; distillate stocks such as diesel rose by 1.5 million barrels, after falling below 100 million barrels for the first time since 2003. Official EIA inventory data was delayed to Thursday noon by the Veterans Day holiday. The EIA also expects the US Strategic Petroleum Reserve to fall to a new low of about 240 million barrels in the first half of next year, and raised its 2027 forecast for average US retail gasoline prices to $3.73 a gallon. 6. Middle East supply recovers: outages down to about 3.8 million bpd; four exporters' shipments up 10%. Data from Kpler shows Middle East crude and condensate outages have dropped to about 3.8 million barrels a day, with Saudi and Iraqi output back to pre-war levels, close to their OPEC+ quotas. Tanker-tracking data shows combined crude exports from Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Iraq, and Kuwait reached 15.53 million barrels a day in October, up 10% from September and roughly in line with levels at the start of the year. 7. Russian refining capacity down about 30% since late October. After renewed Ukrainian drone attacks, Russian oil refining capacity has fallen by about 30% since late October, industry sources said. On Wednesday, a drone attack caused a fire in the port area of Ust-Luga on Russia's Baltic coast, injuring three workers. Vladimir Medinsky, Russia's chief negotiator on Ukraine, said the same day that a peace settlement seemed closer after two days of talks in Abu Dhabi.
